
MacClean 3 FAQs

1. Do I need a cleanup app for My Mac?

Thanks to the maintenance scripts built in OS X, Mac users save much effort in keeping Mac clean and fast. However, that's far from enough. There are still unused files like language files, iPhoto (Photo) caches, binary junks and more left behind and taking considerably huge space. So, it is still recommended to use an additional cleanup utility to keep your Mac clean and to free up more space. That's why MacClean comes.

Scanning through your Mac, MacClean digs out all the safe-to-remove space hoggers and let you decide whether or not keep them. You just enjoy a productive Mac, and let MacClean take care of it for you.

2. Mac does not need any anti-virus program, does it?

Mac isn't immune to viruses, Trojans, backdoors, adware, spyware, and other nefarious applications. Apple's invulnerability to threats was largely due to the lack of interest among hackers to target Mac. With the arising of the first Mac ransomware "KeRanger", we know Mac is never safe from attack. It's wiser to be prepared for an attack than to try to clean up after one. So, back to the question, we'd say "yes, Mac needs an anti-virus program, too".
